A director must have the ability to interpret and translate the written ideas of the screenplay into cinematic form. This overview lecture course gives the aspiring director a comprehensive practical understanding of the film director's craft—the language, grammar, and tools of the medium—from the first script reading to the last day of principal photography and into post-production. Lectures, discussions, screenings, assignments, and class projects guide you through the process of preparing a film for shooting. Topics include script analysis, casting, directing the actor, acting for the camera, collaborating with the creative team, camera blocking, planning the shot list, photographing the subtext, film grammar, visual composition, the role of music, and sound effects.

Introduction to Episodic TV Directing

4.0 units

What are the differences between directing a pilot and directing a TV episode? What makes a pilot succeed? How can I translate my film directing skills into TV directing? Get your questions answered as you gain insight in the landscape of cable and network television and you study the process of directing an episode for a television series, from the first draft to prep, production, and editing. This class is primarily for directors who want to break into television, but writers who want to get involved in the visual concept of their teleplays will also benefit. You first learn how to watch TV episodes critically and how to identify the language of a TV series as it applies to TV directing. You gain an understanding of basic directing techniques, including breaking down the script into storylines and beats, blocking and working with the actors, designing an efficient shotlist, and balancing teamwork with the director's creative vision. Class assignments require you to read and watch many teleplays and TV episodes. The ultimate goal of the course is to come up with an original visual language for a TV pilot that tells the story in your unique creative voice and can be efficiently replicated throughout many episodes.

If directors are the architects of film, then actors are the artisans of a collaborative team working together to realize a singular vision. Through discussions, exercises, casting sessions, and the presentation of scenes, you analyze and apply the directorial skills required for a successful artistic collaboration with performers. You select one dramatic and one comic scene, then cast, rehearse, and present the scenes in class. Topics include analyzing the script, the Method approach to acting, defining objectives, creating dramatic conflict, and the elements of characterization. Actors for class scenes are selected during in-class auditions and final scenes are performed on camera.

The Art and Business of Producing

4.0 units

This course is designed for those who want to fully produce their movie through all of the six stages of a film's journey: buying/development, financing, pre-production, production, post-production, and release/marketing. While many of these stages are explored in depth in other courses, the focus of this course is to explore the effect each stage has on the others, and how the producer guides their interdependency. You learn to recognize and solve problems before they turn in a full-blown crisis and how to make good decisions that help drive your project forward. Topics include strategies for financing and how to relate them to your film; hiring and supporting your director after s/he is hired; identifying and considering your core audience when setting your budget; how your budget impacts casting expectations; working with talent agencies; going to film markets to find distribution; how foreign sales work; bonding and learning from reputable bonding companies; and straddling the relationship of art versus business. By the end of the course, you have an understanding of a number of big issues apt to confront you as a producer and the ability to empower yourself throughout the filmmaking process.

The Art and Craft of MIDI

4.0 units

Learn to bring your electronic realizations of your demos and scores to more vivid life. Through take-home assignments, learn to produce sample-based “cues” that sound more musical and realistic. Student work is presented and critiqued each week in class. Assignments involve programming selections from the classical literature, beginning with small chamber pieces and progressing to large symphonic works. The class culminates in a final assignment of an original orchestral cue set to picture. In addition to the aesthetics of synthestration, this course also covers project studio requirements and considerations, such as computer choices, sequencing software, sample libraries, “electronic” orchestration techniques, and mixing techniques, all with the primary objective of producing “musical” facsimiles of acoustic instrument performances.

Prerequisite(s): X 483.43 Instrumentation and Introduction to Orchestration and/or prior experience in instrumentation and orchestral composing. Access to and proficiency in using a home studio with sequencing software and samples are required for completion of assignments. The course does not include instruction in any specific software. Participants must already have adequate knowledge and resources to MIDI program short orchestral works and deliver these electronically.

MUSC X 483.2 Advanced Orchestration: Applied Techniques for the Studio and Scoring Stage

4.0 units
Building on what was learned in Instrumentation and Introduction to Orchestration, this course further explores the unique evocative capabilities of each musical instrument and examines their applications in regard to scoring to picture, considered from both the composer's and orchestrator's perspective. Examine examples of effective orchestration techniques using both classical score study and case studies from film scores. You also learn how to work with different types of sketches to create a professional quality score. Apply techniques by composing two short pieces to be played in class: one incorporating instruments from the woodwind, brass and percussion families; and one incorporating instruments from the string family, including harp. Prerequisite(s): Knowledge of music notation and theory, experience in music composition, and MUSC X 483.43 Instrumentation and Introduction to Orchestration, or consent of instructor. Basic working knowledge of a music notation program such as Sibelius is highly recommended as students are required to produce and print music scores and instrumental parts for their assignments.

MUSC X 440 Create and Produce Your Own Music Project

4.0 units
Learn the ins and outs of the creative side of music production. Classes are hands-on, real-world, intensive, and cover such concepts as choosing musicians and finessing the best performance out of artists. In this workshop-style class, you are required to produce, mix, and master one music project—either a live band or a solo artist. Your project must incorporate live instruments as well as programmed instruments. The course is personalized to help each student explore the full potential of creating and producing their music. Topics include pre-production, recording using Pro Tools or Logic, getting great vocal performances through microphone techniques, recording and mixing techniques, mastering, and budgeting. Near the end of the course, your projects are played and critiqued in class.

Prerequisite(s): MUSC X 441.3 Audio Recording Theory. Students must have access to a Pro Tools or Logic system and must be proficient in either of these systems.

MUSC X 448.14B The Art and Craft of Music Mixing

4.0 units
Learn the art and craft of mixing music as it applies to the many creative and technical considerations involved in "record-mixing." Each week, a new genre of music is mixed in class from start to finish. All aspects of mixing are covered, from root principles to specialized techniques of veteran mixers. Also covered are in-depth explorations of a myriad of plug-ins and outboard gear; sound-replacing, when and when not to replace sound; summing amps; tuning, tweaking, and nudging elements when needed; printing to analog vs. digital; and stem-mixing. Instruction also includes a field trip to a world-class mixing studio.

MUSC X 404.4 Crafting Great Lyrics: A Songwriting Workshop

4.0 units
Of interest to beginning, as well as more experienced songwriters, this course offers a supportive and inspirational writing workshop environment. Instruction focuses on three equally important and interrelated aspects of songwriting: form, theme, and content. Each week, students perform practical exercises and write lyrics to strengthen their songwriting skills. Exercises are designed to focus story telling, and to expand on rhyming while adding specificity and color to songs. Hit songs, by such writers as The Beatles, Ed Sheeran, Bruno Mars, and Joni Mitchell provide templates for commercial lyric writing. Ultimately, each participant's lyrics are evaluated by the hit song formula: to entertain, to tell the truth, and to connect with your audience.

MUSC X 451 Entrepreneurship for the Indie Artist

4.0 units
Record-low album sales, industry lay-offs, and ever-evolving changes in technology can be disheartening for the aspiring artist looking to break into the business, but nothing could be further from the truth! There's never been a better time to be a do-it-yourself artist and this course gives you the tools to assess what you can do yourself (and how), and when you should bring in the professionals. Many musicians record and market their own music, but only a handful actually monetize those efforts. Learn the importance of establishing a brand and how to harness the power of the Internet to generate awareness and excitement around your music. Topics include creating a business plan for yourself and your brand; forming a marketing campaign; deciding on distribution options; optimizing sales through targeted use of social media tracking tools; building a fan base through gigging and merchandise; publishing and licensing; and the latest developments in promotion—all on a shoestring budget. Instruction features guest speakers, who work in various facets of the industry, to bring real-world perspective to the topics.
